Revolutions audio engine is powered by many tens of thousands of samples, capturing every possible sound/tone variation and nuance of the original drum machines, along with the subtle differences in behaviour inherent of analogue electronics. Each sound has been carefully recorded via a transformer balanced Radial JDI and brought to line level with a NEVE 1073 / API 512c pre-amp. To retain the full frequency range and dynamics of the original instruments, we carefully matched the peak level of each drum, recording them through mastering grade conversion. The first thing to do is to check that your audio interface is compatible with your computer. Compare your computers specifications with the audio devices system requirements on the manufacturers product page. If your interface isnt compatible, you may need to upgrade/downgrade your operating system or use an interface that is compatible. If you are setting up your audio interface for the first time, make sure to first install the latest compatible driver software available from the manufacturer. You can find your interfaces available downloads on the manufacturers product page or our driver index.
